Boston, Dec. 25, 1865.

My Dear and Faithful Friend:

I hope to see you on Tuesday, and shall expect to have you stay with us that night.

Only one more number of the Liberator, and its eventful historic career will be closed! Your farewell letter shall appear in it. You can imagine, from the feelings you cherish in regard to its discontinuance, something of my own state of mind in view of giving up the paper. Yet I believe I shall act wisely in suspending its publication. There are more reasons for doing so than I care to make public.

Your estimate of the Liberator is far beyond what I can presume to claim for it. All your affectionate regards I reciprocate.

Ever your attached friend,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

Henry C. Wright.
